Do I need to change?

It was during his imprisonment at Auschwitz that Viktor Frankl, Jewish psychiatrist, made a discovery. He noticed that all the prisoners who had something to live for, who could focus on some meaning in their lives, were far more likely to survive the horrifying ordeal than others. In his own case, he was determined to survive so that he would be re-united with his wife. After the war, he found out that she had died; but his tremendous desire had enabled him to survive. This is precisely what Paul is talking about in his letter to the Christians at Ephesus. Apparently, there had been some backsliding after their conversion. He warns them to give up what he calls “the aimless kind of life that pagans live”. The pagans were concerned only with good living, the best food and drink, expensive clothes, gambling and frequenting the games. It could be summed up in the well-known saying: “Eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we die”. Such people had no real purpose or goal in life. They thought only of the present moment. Paul tells the Christians to get beyond such a drifting, pointless existence. It could lead only to ruin. He tells them that they must be renewed by a “spiritual revolution”. This was an unsettling call for these Christians who had been slipping back into pagan ways. They had to make a decision. Would they continue living that sort of aimless life? Or, should they renew their consecration to Jesus their Lord. They could not continue living a compromise. Paul was simply reminding them of what Jesus had taught. In the gospel, Jesus tells the Jews: “I am the bread of life. He who comes to me will never be hungry; he who believes in me will never thirst”. Paul could be speaking to us now. There are so many people in today's world who have no real goal or purpose apart from having a good time. The whole environment encourages that sort of aimless life. We Christians can be caught up in it just as the Christians at Ephesus in Paul's time. At our Baptism, we renounced Satan and all his works. It is easy enough to make the promise, but it is far more difficult to carry it out faithfully in each day of our lives. Some people seem to live their faith on automatic pilot. They would acknowledge that they are Christians, but Christ does not seem to influence their way of life. We need to examine ourselves; and that means facing up to the possibility that we have lost our edge when it comes to living our faith. If so, then, like the Christians of Ephesus, we too need a spiritual revolution. Despite any failures and mistakes, we can have limitless confidence in the goodness and mercy of God. Jesus has promised us: “He who comes to me will never be hungry; he who believes in me will never thirst”. His grace enables us to remain faithful. We will not be spared our share of suffering, but assures us that whatever trials come our way, we will never be alone.

ST JOHN VIANNEY 1786 – 1859

Known as the 'Cure of Ars'. As a young farm hand he taught other children their prayers. Assigned in 1818 to the parish of Ars, a tiny village near Lyons, he would spend 40 years there as parish priest. He was gifted with the discernment of spirits, prophecy, hidden knowledge, and working miracles. Crowds came to hear him preach, and to receive the Sacrament of Reconciliation. By 1855 there were 20,000 pilgrims a year to Ars, extra trains had to be put on.

BLESSED MARY MACKILLOP 1842 – 1909

Founder of the 'Sisters of St Joseph'

Like Jesus himself, Mary was a troublemaker. She worked tirelessly for the poor, was excommunicated from the Church, and later ordered to leave her diocese for promoting controversial views. Born into a poor Melbourne family, Mary left home when she was 14 and gave all the money she earned to her family. In 1861 she went to work in Penola, a small town in South Australia. Here Mary met Father Julian Woods. Mary felt a religious calling, but hadn't been able to find an order that suited her. So in 1866, she and Father Woods started their own; 'The Sisters of St. Joseph'. The order was dedicated to the education of poor children. The order spread to Adelaide and other parts of South Australia, and membership grew rapidly. Mary was a woman who stood up for what she believed which brought her into conflict with religious leaders.

She took a vow of poverty, which meant she had to beg for money. Catholic Church leaders didn't like begging, but Mary refused to change her ways. The tension escalated into conflict over educational matters and as a result Mary was excommunicated by Bishop Shiel of Adelaide for insubordination in 1871. The excommunication was lifted 6 months later. In 1883, Mary came into conflict with the church establishment by insisting on an equalitarian rather than hierarchical organization. Bishop Reynolds told her to leave his diocese (Adelaide) and Mary transferred the headquarters of the Josephites to Sydney where she later died. Mary never became bitter against the Church leaders that had opposed her. This forgiving attitude was complemented by the outstanding work of her Sisters for the poor. Mary MacKillop was declared 'Blessed' by Pope John Paul II in Sydney on 19 January 1995.
